Indiana Campus Compact 2016 Engaged Campus Award

The Engaged Campus Award recognizes Indiana institutions of higher education for exemplary commitment to advancing the civic purposes of higher education.

Applicants should demonstrate their ability to improve community life and to educate students for civic and social responsibility. Applicants are reviewed according to criteria expressed in Campus Compact's Indicators of Engagement (see attachment, Indicators of Engagement).

APPLICATION PROCESS:

Applicants should submit the following by January 15, 2016:

- Application Cover Sheet, with completed background information.
- A 500 word abstract describing how the work of the institution aligns with the mission of Indiana Campus Compact and summarizing qualifications for the award.
- A statement describing your institution and community, including: student body size, Carnegie Community Engagement Classification status, community size and dynamics, and other factors relevant to your application.
- A narrative demonstrating institutional engagement as defined in Campus Compact's Indicators of Engagement (see attachment, Indicators of Engagement). Please include specific examples for as many of the Indicators as possible, and your action plan to develop those indicators not yet established on your campus.
- A video no longer than 3 minutes, demonstrating institution-wide engagement with the community. (.mp4 format) This is required, but is a supplemental part of the application. The technical attributes of the video will not be considered during review. Use this video to showcase your campus community connections. Videos will be featured at the Indiana Campus Compact Awards Gala.
- Letters of support (with completed support forms) from at least three of the following categories: campus administrator, faculty member, student, community partner, or other entity associated with campus engagement efforts. At least one letter must be from a community partner.
- A letter from the President/Chancellor of the institution expressing administrative leadership and support for the institutionalization of service engagement.
- A 300 dpi print quality photo for publicity. This photo should represent the climate of service engagement on your campus. What are you most proud of in terms of community engagement?

The award winner will be recognized at the Indiana Campus Compact Service Engagement Summit on Monday, February 27, 2017 in Indianapolis, IN. The winner will receive a cash gift of $1,000 and we encourage the campus to donate a portion to an Indiana-based community partner in order to further its service to the community, and use the remainder to further support the campus's community-based engagement efforts.

All documents must be submitted in one pdf file (you may submit your photo and video separately) to iccgrant@iupui.edu with 2017 Engaged Campus Award in the subject line.

Faxes and hard copy submissions will not be accepted.

Campus Compact's Indicators of Engagement: Themes and Indicators

INSTITUTIONAL CULTURE: Although all colleges and universities are nominally of their communities, there exists a wide spectrum of possibilities for understanding and acting on this affiliation. Institutional culture includes those indicators that help establish a felt culture of engagement, a culture that demonstrably affects the way in which faculty, students, and community partners experience the goals and priorities of their college.

Indicators of Institutional Culture:

- 1) Mission and purpose that explicitly articulates a commitment to the public purposes of higher education.
- 2) Administrative and academic leadership (president, trustees, provost) that is in the forefront of institutional transformation that supports civic engagement.

CURRICULUM & PEDAGOGY: One of the most important lessons of the last decade has been that civic engagement must be rooted in the core work of the university if it is to be effectively institutionalized. Since the core work of the university is teaching and learning, civic engagement must be linked directly to the curriculum. Curriculum and pedagogy looks at those indicators that measure the degree to which community-related work has become part of the institution's teaching-learning activities.

Indicators of Curriculum & Pedagogy:

- 3) Disciplines, departments, and interdisciplinary work have incorporated community-based education allowing it to penetrate all disciplines and reach the institutions academic core.
- 4) Teaching and learning incorporate a community-based, public problem-solving approach to teaching and learning.

FACULTY CULTURE: Closely related to curricular issues are issues of faculty identity. If faculty feel neither prepared nor rewarded for their engaged work, the curricular connection cannot long survive. Faculty culture examines those indicators that suggest faculty are being given the support they need if they are to assume the task of linking the curriculum to the community.

Indicators of Faculty Culture:

- 5) Faculty development opportunities are available for faculty to retool their teaching and redesign their curricula to incorporate community-based activities and reflection on those activities within the context of the course.
- 6) Faculty roles and rewards reflect a reconsideration of scholarship that embraces a scholarship of engagement that is incorporated into promotion and tenure guidelines and review.

MECHANISMS & RESOURCES: Successful engagement depends not only on institutional culture and faculty self-understanding; it also depends - rather directly - on the concrete and specific resources the university is willing to commit to civic engagement. Such a commitment must be sufficiently real that it can survive the pressures of competing priorities and difficult economic times. Mechanisms and resources includes those indicators that tell us community concerns can hold their own even when it come to decisions regarding the bottom line. It also focuses on the ways in which students themselves are empowered to support the engagement process.

Indicators of Mechanisms & Resources:

- 7) Internal resource and budget allocations are adequate for establishing, enhancing, and deepening community-based work on campus – for faculty, students, and programs that involve community partners.

- 8) Support structures and resources in the form of visible and easily accessible mechanisms (i.e., centers, offices) on campus to assist faculty with community-based teaching and to broker community partnerships.
- 9) Coordination of community-based activities ensures the deliberate, strategic connection of various forms of engagement, including student service, service-learning, community-based research, and other community engagement activities on campus.
- 10) Student Voice that recognizes students as key partners in their own education and civic development and supports their efforts to act on issues important to themselves and their peers.

COMMUNITY-CAMPUS EXCHANGE: Civic engagement is not merely a matter of successful "outreach". It assumes an important shift in the way in which the college regards the community in which it is embedded. No longer does the college act on its own - however benign its intentions. Instead, it recognizes the community as its complementary equal, fully entitled to participate in all matters affecting the two. Community-campus exchange looks at those indicators that measure the community role in the engagement process.

Indicators of Community-Campus Exchange:

- 11) External resource allocations made available for community partners to create richer learning environments for students and for community-building efforts in local neighborhoods.
- 12) Community voice that deepens the role of community partners in contributing to community-based education and shaping outcomes that benefit the community.
- 13) Forums for fostering public dialogue are created that include multiple stakeholders in public problem-solving.
